Thorbjørn the Dane is a traditional Scandinavian spiritual leader called a gothi (pronounced (go-thee)). The gothi's roots stem back to the Viking Age. He is a practitioner of the Old Norse beliefs called Heathenism (a form of polytheism). A gothi is responsible for the spiritual needs and protections of his people. There is no singular description of a gothi's duties, for they often develop their own distinct practices based on the guidance received from the gods and spirits around them. They have been described by many sources as priest, spiritualist, shaman, etc., and have even held the duties of clan/village leader or chief, for the Norse traditionally looked to their spiritual leaders as their community leaders as well. Thorbjørn is also a firm believer in traditional apprenticeships, and does not subscribe to modern paid education, and does not offer such training. Gothi Thorbjørn does not charge for any of his services; however, he appreciates donations.

Thorbjørn's spiritualist medium abilities are hereditary, passed down from his grandfather.

In the 1980's, Thorbjørn accomplished a lengthy traditional apprenticeship with a Native American shaman, and for two decades he worked as a shamanic spiritual leader and healer.

Then Thorbjørn found himself directed away from his Native American heritage toward his Scandinavian heritage to begin a path as a gothi, and brought much of his shamanic knowledge and ability with him.

Now, over twenty five years after he began his shamanic apprenticeship, he has amassed a great deal of knowledge and experience in spiritual matters. He has taught seven students over that time, and has worked with shamans and medicine people from several native nations. As a gothi he is available for blots, sumbels, profession, spiritual counseling, the life passage rites of birth, adulthood, marriage, and funeral, spiritual exams, spirit animal introductions, spirit healing, soul retrievals, spirit transitions, spirit communication, spirit protection, and spirit removals.
